The service, which is free, seeks to empower and support marginalised young people, co-developing services and promoting mental health and wellbeing. The Service offers structured support to identified, at-risk young people. - The early intervention service is based upon the development of strategies, practices and services to recognise and support young people to seek help for their mental health at the earliest possible point. - Practices that support accessible and acceptable mental health service delivery, designed by and for the needs of the young people. Services that ensure young people receive strengths based therapeutic interventions at the earliest sign of an emerging mental health difficulty before more serious mental health difficulties develop.
- Non-clinical interventions that seek to engage young people in programmes enhancing their personal and social development and integration into their community and strengthening their protective factors. Programmes are flexible, at times when young people are available, non-stigmatising and using a variety of accessible approaches and locations.
- The Service aims to meet a clearly identified need and to respond in a comprehensive, holistic way to the needs of vulnerable young people while also providing guidance to their families. The non-clinical interventions that are delivered are experiential, developmental, resilience building programmes designed to promote positive coping capacities and self-care in the face of stressful and difficult circumstances.
